DETAILED ACTION

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Hatsuda et al, European EP 1,029,886 or Wada et al, U. S. Patent 5,760,080.

Both references to Hatsuda et al and Wada et al teach absorbent polymer particles made from acrylic acid polymers and crosslinked, with the particle size within the claimed range as taught by Hatsuda et al in paragraph 0039 and in column 10 of Wada et al. The specific properties of esoteric absorption are not disclosed, but, since the polymer particles are specifically taught for the same use and are made from the same polymers with the same particle size and crosslinking, it is reasonable to presume that they would possess the same characteristics absent evidence to the contrary, In re Fitzgerald Et Al, 205 USPQ 594. The examiner has presented a reasonable presumption that the teaching of the reference is the same as the requirements of the claims. Under In re Fitzgerald practice, it is now incumbent upon Applicant(s) to present evidence of difference between the claims and the teaching of the reference in order to overcome the rejection. The evidence required would have to be commensurate in scope to the claims.

4. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

5. Claims 1-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, because the specification, while being enabling for crosslinked polymers of acrylic acid, does not reasonably provide enablement for polymers of any structure that may contain the required absorption properties. The specification does not enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to practice the invention commensurate in scope with these claims. It would require undo experimentation to determine which polymers, from among the multitude of those potentially containing the required absorption properties, would actually meet the claims and what production techniques might give the required absorption properties. Furthermore, the requirement that the polymers be "prepared by crosslinking a water-soluble unsaturated monomer" is broader or different than the enabled disclosure which is to crosslinking of polymerized monomers. Claims are, therefore, properly rejected under 35 USC 112.
